Stratus Safety Measures During the Coronavirus Pandemic

The health and safety of our patients and team members is always the top priority at Stratus. We are accredited by the Joint Commission, and always adhere to the highest patient care and safety standards in the industry. During this Coronavirus pandemic, we have also adopted the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's (CDC) guidelines for increased precautionary measures for healthcare professionals who care for patients. We have implemented the following protocols:

A Stratus employee must be healthy in order to enter your home. All Stratus team members must stay at home and not work if they currently have an infection or believe they have been exposed to COVID-19. Team members may not return to work until they receive proper testing and approval from a qualified healthcare provider.

Our technician is prepared with protective equipment, including gloves, masks, safety glasses, clean uniforms, and booties. Our technicians have been trained on how to use these items and have practiced for these types of situations.

We take special care and make sure that all of our equipment is cleaned and disinfected following the proper methods. We always use disposable electrodes for each test. We also supply a single-use carrying case and batteries for the EEG recorder you will be carrying with you.

Before coming to your home, the technician will call to confirm your appointment and make sure you do not have a fever or any type of infection. They will also ask you if anyone in your family is sick or if you think you have been in close contact with anyone who has COVID-19. If you answer yes to any of these questions, we will ask you to reschedule your appointment.
